The symptoms of the President up to 6 o'clock were not decidedly worse, nor had any marked un-favorable change taken place in his general condition; but his failure to gain strength from the constantly-increasing quantiof nourishment tles disappointed expectattion, and the threat ening aspect of the glandular swelling was taken as another reason for discouragement. He admitted that there had been no gain of strength and no im provement in his general condition, but he attributed this largely to the grandular swelling, which had become, he said, the principal and most threatening feature of the case.
